About the Seminar:

When the CEO of face book Mark Zuckerberg personally took the responsibility for letting third party access to FB data, the whole world woke up to the privacy concern again. With the advent of knowledge and information technology, intellectual capital has gained substantial information (IB). In the last decade the world has witnessed an increasing number of cross border transaction. Companies and individuals do business in their country and in several countries not only selling goods but also services. Intellectual property rights (IPRs) are country specific, but have imperative influence of global economy. Issues of legislations, trademarks, registrations, copy rights, infringement and domain names are all related and complex issues which each educated individual should be aware of.

The focus area of the seminar is 'Indian Perspective of Infringement of Intellectual Property Rights'. IPR| can be defined as "it is a creation of mind: invention, literary and artistic works and symbols, names and images used in commerce". When one tries to answer the obvious question what is IPR one can boil it down to that it is like any other property rights which allows the creator or owners or patents, trademarks or copyrighted works to benefit from their own work or investment in creation. The importance of protecting intellectual property is because the progress and wellbeing of humanity rests on its capacity to create and invent new works in the area of technology and culture. The legal protection of new creation encourages the commitment of additional resources for further innovation. Therefore IP system helps strive a balance between the interests of innovator and the public interest providing an environment in which creativity and invention can flourish for the benefit of all.
