

2.3.1 - Student centric methods, such as experiential learning, participative learning and problem solving methodologies are used for enhancing learning experiences

The student centric methods are start from the classroom level to the different co-curricular and extra-curricular activities in the college. The basic idea of the student centric method is to inculcate different expected skills and knowledge assigned for the course as the outcome. As expected to the & NAAC the end product through the higher education must acquire adequate skills. College management and administration take care of its students by maintaining the required facilities for students to complete the Programme and Courses with the experiential and participative learning level.

Every department form their study circle nominating/electing executive body from the classrooms. The study circle through students help department different curricular and co-curricular activities democratically involving students directly. The study circle inculcate leadership qualities and help them learn decision making and shouldering responsibilities from the college level. Also on various committees students are nominated as participative measure.

Every department also take their students to college central library for orientation to the different section of books and Learning resources

In the classroom level students are given experience of group discussion, group works, project works, student's seminars and symposiums, and assignments, these activities help students learn as a team and help learn problem solving methods. Field Work and Study our also contributed to enhance the experiential learning. Every depts. organize study tour and field visits for students. Post Graduate and Ph.D. Scholars are mandatorily ask to participate in the subject seminar and present paper. The research scholars are also advised to publish research papers in journals. College has two Journals. One is "Perspectives" Interdisciplinary National Peer reviewed Research Journal and another is "Cenacle" for English Studies. Scholars regularly publish papers in the college journals under the guidance of Subject Professors. College also has "Maitree" student's magazine published annually. Students publish their creative and nonfictions which gives them a platform for literary explorations and publications.

In case of Co-curricular activities students are participated in NCC, NSS and social extension activities where they are exposed to the social realities directly which help them learn the problem and methods to reach the solution. In NSS special camps in the rural areas for the seven days residential camp, students live in such situations where they themselves govern the entire camp activities in the guidance of teachers. They are also directly exposed to the rural issues of social set up and local crisis in public affairs. Students learn to negotiate with them by understanding such situations closely. Also every departments organize different activities to foster the subject skills in a different way.

In extracurricular activities students are involve in cultural and sports activities through which they are put in the participative and competitive learning. Weekly teachers prepared their lessons with the PPT based teaching and ICT based learning helps the students get the exposure to the wider knowledge for earning the subject skills and potential knowledge for lifelong learning.
